

Oregon Coast Adventures Summary

by Pete & Christina King

Updated April 22, 2021

This is not a river story but a guide to the Oregon Coast - one of our favorite places to visit. Yes, we pass by some whitewater rivers along our coastal travels but have never run any rivers in Oregon or California. Friends and family have asked why we keep returning again and again, this guide attempts to explain why. Unfortunately, this guide only gives you a taste of Oregon, there is much more to the coast than we have been able to capture here. Enjoy!

Distance: It is approximately 3,700 miles round trip from Buena Vista, CO to the Oregon Coast and back. We typically go from Astoria (south on Hwy 101) to San Francisco and home through Lake Tahoe. It is a long way there and back but slow down and enjoy the time you spend on the coast. We usually drive quickly across Colorado, Utah, Idaho and Oregon and then slow down dramatically once we get to the Columbia River Gorge. Aire and Cascade Outfitters (Maravia) are fun stops in Boise which can break up the trip. Once you reach Hwy 101 in Oregon, unless you are a logging truck or large RV, my advice is to give way to these big rigs. They will not shift over and will win if they hit you. We also prefer to travel from the north to south to enjoy the "ocean" side vistas on the highway lane closest to the ocean. Lastly, we get to end the trip in San Francisco (the big city) after weeks of beaches mostly to ourselves. The Oregon coast is fairly crowded during the prime summer months but can be quite empty in early June and Oct through the Winter. The commercial Oregon Crab season usually runs from Dec to August but it seems like a crabworker strike (or regulatory agency) always delays the annual official opening of Dec 1 to several weeks/months later every year. It can start as late as Jan 15.

Weather: It can rain a lot! Be mentally and physically prepared (rain slickers) and do not let it stop any beach and hiking activities you have planned. We have visited in early June (nice weather and not crowded) and numerous times from October through January. Winter surf and storms can be quite intimidating but also wonderfully exciting. It gets dark early in the winter so plan on dining at restaurants for dinner when possible. Hint: An odd trend I have noticed is that most seafood markets seem to be located on the south end of towns. I do not know why. Temperatures (even in December) can be mild (highs of 50 to 60's). We have had warm trips and cold/rainy trips - all were great. Note the numerous Tsunami warning signs that abound along the coast. I wish you good luck if you hear the sirens for a real Tsunami. We have heard communities test the sirens but since most of the Oregon State Parks on this stretch are on the beach, my guess is that most campers would find it impossible to escape if a Tsunami arrives quickly. It would be incredibly difficult to run to high ground for safety in the middle of the night. High ground can be far away.

Camping/Restaurant ratings: Almost all of the Oregon state park campsites are open year round and MOST have showers included (they do not have to worry about freezing temperatures and no separate coins are needed for showers). In addition, Yurts are available. I would recommend against tent camping if you can avoid it because packing up wet rain tents EVERY day can get old quickly. In my opinion, Oregon State Parks are the best in the country! They are usually located on prime beachfront real estate with soft sand dunes, steep cliffs, brilliant sunsets, colorful tide pools, wind twisted trees, steep hiking/biking trails, etc....Go to Oregon State Parks to get the details. My impression is that there are far fewer hotels directly on the beach compared to the prime real estate in state parks. I have set up a personal rating system for some of the camps mentioned below that also apply to my personal restaurant ratings as well! I am usually not a fan of clam chowder but this coast produces a delicious product.

 = Excellent

* = Good

 = Average

 = Poor

* = Do not stay/eat here!

Activities:

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Hiking • Biking • Crabbing • Clamming- very easy to learn and be successful! • Tidepooling • Fishing • Shelling 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Rockhounding • Whale watching • Boating- both ocean and whitewater • Aquarium- Oregon Coast Aquarium • Walking the beaches • Seafood- opportunities abound for delicious dining out or the ability to purchase fresh seafood to cook at home or at camp

Whale watching tips: bring good binoculars, unless you have seen whales spouting before I recommend stopping if you see a lot of people at a viewpoint. There are several whale watching seasons so plan accordingly if you want to do this special activity. Cape Foulweather usually has volunteer whale spotters on duty to help you out. They are the pro's and can help you spot them. Calm seas help when spying for whale spouts. Once you have spotted one whale, you can usually recognize whales on your own the next time around.

Things to bring:

- Rain slickers
- Ball caps with brims (to keep rain out of your eyes)
- Sturdy Large Umbrella
- Binoculars
- Your Dog- they will love the beach and Oregon beaches are very dog friendly! (do not forget to use pooper scooper mitts)
- Hiking boots (waterproofed)- Sandals are too cold in the off-season

Interesting and Scenic Oregon Lighthouses: many have free tours

Cape Meares Yaquina Head Yaquina Bay Heceta Head	Umpqua River Cape Arago Coquille River Cape Blanco

Favorite Tide Pools and my notes:

Tide Pools	Comments (E, M, D)- easy, moderate or difficult to get to
Ecola State Park - 2 miles north of Cannon Beach	M
Hugpoint State Park, up on the famous "Hugpoint" area	?
Haystack Rock - At Cannon Beach	E- minimal if at all
Cape Meares - 10 miles west of Tillamook & 1 mile north of Oceanside	M
Oceanside @ south end of beach, by rock cliff	minimal
Maxwell Point - 9 miles west of Tillamook	E, next to Oceanside
Cape Lookout - 18 miles south of Tillamook, Pacific City Loop	M
Cape Kiwanda State Natural Area - Three Capes Scenic Loop (Pacific City)	E/M, lots of smooth polished ocean stones also
Lincoln City @ Roads End Wayside
Boiler Bay - 1 mile south of Depoe Bay at the State Scenic Viewpoint	D and hazardous surf; underwater at most medium tides
Otter Rock - 9 miles north of Newport	M
Agate Beach Tide Pools	Could not find them at low tide
Yaquina Head - Agate Beach, 4 miles north of Newport. Seal Rock State Recreation Area - 12 miles south of Newport	E, go to Basalt beach – see below, not the Quarry area, fee area- worth it at low tide only
Basalt Beach - Starting at the Yaquina Head lighthouse, you follow a winding stair down to a cobbled beach - the round, smooth, jet-black basalt stones are a result of underwater volcanic eruptions	M, much better than quarry fee area at Yaquina Head, lots of seals too

Seal Rock State Recreation site	E/M
Yachats State Recreation Area - Just north of the Yachats River	E, very good
Cape Perpetua Scenic Area Captain Cook Trail (to tidepools) - 0.6-mile loop from the Interpretive Center, under Highway 101, through wind-sculpted vegetation, past an old CCC camp, Indian shell middens and tide pools. At high tide the Spouting Horn can be observed across Cook's Chasm. Paved, easy walk.	E, very good
Neptune State Park - 13 miles south of Waldport Bob Creek (Bray Point) - Southern edge of Neptune State Park	E
Bob Creek to Bray Point	E/M, very very good!
Sunset Bay State Park - 9 miles south of Coos Bay	E
Cape Arago State park - 11 miles south of Coos Bay (3 coves to explore)	M
Five Mile Point - 13 miles south of Coos Bay at Seven Devils Road	E
Coquille Point - West of Bandon at south bank of Coquille River	E
Cape Blanco State Park - 10 miles northwest of Port Orford	M
Port Orford - North of Boat dock on west 9th street Rocky Point - 3 miles south of Port Orford Arizona Ranch Beach - 12 miles south of Port Orford (fee through private campground)	E
Lone Ranch Beach - 5 miles north of Brookings	E
Harris Beach State Recreation Area - Just north of Brookings Winchuk Beach - North side of Winchuk River	E
